Adm. Alan G. Kirk is resigning as Ambassador to Nationalist China and will be replaced by Adm. Jerauld Wright, it was learned yesterday.

Kirk, 73, has been in ill health. He has been Ambassador since last May.

Wright, 64, is a member of the Board of National Estimates of the Central Intelligence Agency, a group that assesses the military strength of foreign powers. From 1954 until 1960, he was supreme Allied commander of naval and other forces in the Atlantic area under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.
